THE number of tourists visiting Mount Popa in the last two months touched over 2,000, according to the site's board of trustees. In addition, several locals also visited the pilgrimage site in Mandalay Region in central Myanmar. Mount Popa is situated about 50 kms southeast of Bagan.

Tourists usually head to Mount Popa after visiting the Bagan ancient cultural zone, said U Kyaw Win Swe, the secretary of Mount Popa's board of trustees.

Over the last two months, tourists from more than 20 Asian and European countries visited Mount Popa, and a majority of them were from France, followed by Germany. Among Asian countries, the number of visitors from Japan was the highest, followed by the Republic of Korea.

During the summer holidays in primary schools, Mount Popa is crowded with pilgrims and tourists. However, most visitors make day trips and the number of visitors staying overnight is extremely low at present.

Animal products exports exceed $265 mln

MYANMAR'S exports of animal products between 1 October, 2018 and 1 March, 2019 reached a high of US$265.9 million, a sharp rise compared with less than $36 million registered in the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year.

Myanmar's animal products exports are mainly driven by the private sector, with income from the public sector remaining less than $1 million.

At present, the volume of cattle exports to China is on the decline owing to trade suspension, said Mandalay cattle exporters.

Only some companies, which had entered into advance purchase agreements, have traded in recent days. According to traders in the Muse market, a large cow is currently priced over K2 million, while a small one is fetching below K2 million.

Myanmar's livestock exports are forecast to rise as trade of livestock was allowed in late 2017. The country is exploring new export markets for cattle.

Cattle that are more than five years old are being exported along with vaccination certificates, health certificates, and farming registration certificates. According to the 2018 census, there were a total of 11.5 million heads of cattle in the country.

An increase in the value of animal products exports can help reduce the trade deficit.

Besides animal products, Myanmar also exports agricultural products, minerals, forest products, finished industrial goods, and other marketable products. — Ko Htet

Chief Minister asks Kayah investment panel to share challenges faced in screening projects

THE Kayah State Investment Committee held a meeting yesterday to discuss boosting investments in the state and creating more jobs for locals.

Kayah State Chief Minister UL Phaung Sho gave the opening speech at the meeting. He asked KIC members to strictly follow investment rules and regulations set by the government, work towards attracting more investments into the state, provide reasons for any delay, and point out challenges faced while screening investment proposals.

Afterwards, Daw May Myo Zaw, the secretary of the KIC, discussed matters concerning land, preparing endorsements, and conducting awareness campaigns. Then, the members of the committee shared their opinions.

At present, 11 local enterprises have received endorsements for hotel projects, while one foreign enterprise has brought in a capital of US$3.18 million to carry out grandparent pig farming in the state, according to data from the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA).

Under the new Myanmar Investment Law enacted in 2017, the MIC has delegated the power to permit investments to regional and state authorities to encourage business. The Region and State Investment Committees are allowed to grant permissions to local and foreign proposals, where the initial investment does not exceed K6 billion, or $5 million. — Kyaw Kyaw (Mahlaing)

Solid waste management is everyone's business

WASTE not, want not. This old saying rings true even today, as global leaders and local communities alike increasingly call for a fix for the 'throw-away culture'. But beyond individuals and households, the issue of waste also represents a broader challenge that affects human health and livelihoods, the environment, and welfare.

According to a 2012 World Bank report, Myanmar produces 5,616 tons of solid waste per day, which amounts to 0.44 kilograms per person.

The number is expected to reach 0.85 kg by 2025, driven by an increase in consumption and growth in urban population, and lack of effective waste treatment.

Local authorities in the regions and states are carrying out clean-up programs to combat the waste issue. But, we need to do more. We need a system that can go beyond visible cleanliness.

Solid waste management is a universal issue that matters to every single person in the world. And with over 90 per cent of waste in low-income countries being dumped openly or burned, it is the poor and the most vulnerable who are disproportionately affected.

As the population increases, natural resources are over-extracted, waste is improperly disposed, emissions from factories increase, water, land, and air become polluted, the natural environment is degraded, and problems related to climate change are encountered.

These pose major challenges to sustainable development and severely hinder efforts to reduce poverty.

It has been found that waste is not traditionally separated at the source — our homes, offices, or businesses — before it goes into a collection bin.

We need to educate people to practice waste management in homes or offices, prior to garbage collection and transportation.

In the majority of towns in Myanmar, there is no formal mechanism for processing and disposing waste. This means trash is dumped — anywhere and everywhere.

To counter this problem, trash bins must be installed at regular intervals along the streets and in public places in the cities. Waste bins must be emptied by trash collectors on a daily basis.

The collected waste must then be disposed of properly, according to the standard operating procedures.

Moreover, reusable waste can be separated and recycled for further useful applications.

Solid waste management is everyone's business. Ensuring effective and proper solid waste management is critical to realizing the Sustainable Development Goals.

Therefore, waste needs to be disposed efficiently in accordance with the present time and system.

Measles that needs 20-hour monitoring

MEASLES is an airborne disease which spreads easily through the coughs and sneezes of infected people. It may also be spread through contact with saliva or nasal secretions and sharing living space with an infected person.

Myanmar faced the outbreak of measles once in 2011 and 2012, and in 2013 measles infection occurred 15 times among the youngsters between 18 and 20 years. The infection was worse in border areas where vaccination programs were weak. As there were signs of the possible outbreak of measles and German measles in 2015 in Myanmar a new vaccination program was launched in the whole country with energetic efforts.

Vaccination program

The vaccination program was divided into two sectors — school-based program and public-based program. The school-based program involved the vaccination of children from five to 15 years between 19 and 27 January 2015. The public-based program was launched from 19 to 28 February 2015, and vaccinated all the children between nine months and five years and children who missed the first vaccination campaign.

their children to be inoculated with vaccine during the campaigns," said Dr Aung Naing Oo, Assistant Director of Public Health Department.

A vaccination program will be launched on a national scale in November and December this year. Records showed that 1276 persons were suffering from measles in the entire country in 2018.

"We never inject children who are allergic to the vaccine or unhealthy," Dr Aung Naing Oo explained.

The Health Department launched an emergency vaccination program in August 2016 in Naga Self-Administered Zone where measles was broke out. The outbreak even killed people in the villages of Lahe and Namyun townships of Naga Self-Administered Zone.

Elimination of measles

A special vaccination program covering Kachin, Kayah and Rakhine states and Wa and Kokang areas apart from Naga area where the vaccination campaign was weak was launched. Myanmar adopted a project to wipe out measles and control the inborn German measles totally in 2020. UNICEF, World Health Organization, UN, US Red Cross and US Disease Control Centre are gave vaccine to under-15 primary, middle and high school students (including students who had reached 15) of government schools, private schools and monastic education schools. In the public-based program, the vaccine was delivered to all the children of ages between nine months and 15 years, and those who were not vaccinated by the school-based program.

According to the Ministry of Health and Sports, a vaccination program covering children of ages between nine months and 15 years will be launched in highly infected seven townships of Yangon Region.

Vaccine will be delivered through injection at the Health

Myothit (East) and Dagon Myothit (Seikkan) townships.

Because of a major outbreak of measles in Hlainthaya Township in 2016, an emergency vaccination program was launched in five townships — Twantay, Insein, Kyimyindine, Hlainthaya and Thakayta.

The cause of measles

Measles is caused by the measles virus. The virus is highly contagious and is spread by coughing and sneezing.

"We are delivering injection-based vaccine regularly. We launched additional vaccination programs during the years when the infection rate was high. Mothers or guardians should willfully let the frontrunners in implementing the project.

Children who are not vaccinated are prone to measles and sequel diseases. Vaccine must be delivered to a child when he reaches nine months for the first and for the second time when he reaches the age of 18 months. Myanmar started the measles vaccination program in 1978.

Myanmar launched the mass vaccination program three times from 2002 to 2004, and another three times in 2017. Vaccine was delivered in the places hit by Cyclone Nargis in 2008.

Full course of vaccination

According to a research paper submitted at the Myanmar research conference, 45 per cent of children between 12 months and 23 months fail to undergo full course of vaccination. Of them 32.5 percent are in urban areas and the remaining 49.6 percent are in rural areas. Among the states and regions, Ayeyawady Region has the largest number (over 66%) of non-vaccinated children.

The Ministry of Health and Sports has launched the hospital-based vaccination program for the children who were not vaccinated for various reasons. The program is being launched in 90 over-100-bed hospitals with the goal of giving full course of vaccination to children and ever availability of the vaccination campaign.

Additional program

An additional vaccination program will be launched in Insein, Hlinethaya, Shwepyitha, Dagon Myothit (Seikkan), Dagon Myothit (South), Dagon Myothit (East) and Mingaladon where measles epidemic occurs. Nearly 600,000 children between nine months and 15 years will be given vaccine.

Normally over 10 per cent of children failed to take the vaccine in accord with the course, and in some cases it exceeds 15 percent, said the program manager Dr Htar Htar Lin. The Ministry of Health and Sports will implement the Outbreak Response Immunization soon after the start of the nation-wide mass immunization program.

In Myanmar, there are children who miss the vaccination programs or who fail to take the complete course of vaccine. All parents or guardians should pay attention to the announcements and campaigns of the Ministry of Health and Sports.

Sagaing looks to Japan for help in managing, disposing waste

The Sagaing Region's Development Affairs Committee is coordinating with Fukushima City, Fujita Corporation, and Mitsubishi Research Institute of Japan to manage and dispose waste produced in towns in the region, said U Thit Htoo Myint, the Director of the Development Affairs Committee.

"Currently, garbage trucks equipped with GPS are going around the region to collect waste, and we are coordinating with Japanese companies to manage and dispose waste collected in the region," he added.

"Waste disposal, which was one of the main functions of the Monywa Town garbage management system, had some weak points, and so, the municipal committee will now work with Fukushima city to get technical assistance and help from experts with the FUGTA company, to ensure better garbage collection in the towns in Sagaing Region," said U Kyaw Myo Win, the chairman of the Monywa township's Development Affairs Committee.

"For better management of waste, the authorities are taking measures to implement a garbage transfer system. The waste that is collected will be kept near the Japan graveyard in Dawna Ward, Monywa, and then disposed in Kaingtaw. Monywa region yields about 130 tons of garbage a day. We are planning to implement the garbage collection project over three years to cover the whole town," he said. — Myo Win Tun (Monywa)

Trump to seek another $8.6 billion for border wall

WASHINGTON (United States) — US President Donald Trump will seek $8.6 billion in fresh funding for a wall on the US-Mexico border in the 2020 budget request, likely triggering another fight with Congress, White House economic adviser Larry Kudlow said on Sunday.

The request, which is to be unveiled on Monday, would far exceed the $5.7 billion Trump demanded last year, which led to an impasse that resulted in a 35-day partial shutdown of the US government, the longest ever.

Democratic congressional leaders Nancy Pelosi and Chuck Schumer decried the move, warning Trump that another legislative defeat would await him.

Kudlow, interviewed on “Fox News Sunday,” conceded that the new request would likely mean a renewed fight in Congress over wall funding.

“I suppose there will be,” he said.

But he said Trump “is going to stay with his wall. He is going to stay with his border security. I think it’s essential.”

‘Expensive and ineffective’

In a joint statement, Pelosi and Schumer charged that Trump “hurt millions of Americans and caused widespread chaos when he recklessly shut down the government to try to get his expensive and ineffective wall.”

“Congress refused to fund his wall and he was forced to admit defeat and reopen the government. The same thing will repeat itself if he tries this again. We hope he learned his lesson,” they said.

The Washington Post reported that the president’s request for wall funding will come in the form of $5 billion from the Department of Homeland Security and another $3.6 billion from the Pentagon. That will be on top of the $6.7 billion in wall funding that Trump has ordered redirected from other government programs under a national emergency he declared last month.

He declared the emergency after the Congress approved only $1.375 billion for construction of 55 miles (90 kilometres) of barriers along the border in Texas.

On a separate issue, Kudlow expressed optimism that US economic growth will surpass three percent “in 2019 and beyond,” adding that the 2020 budget anticipates a five percent reduction in government spending. — AFP ■

Guaidó to ask legislature to declare ‘state of alarm’ in Venezuela

CARACAS (Venezuela) — National Assembly leader Juan Guaidó said on Sunday he will ask the Venezuelan legislature to declare a “state of alarm” in order to request international aid amid a massive power outage.

Guaidó, who declared himself acting president in January, told reporters he has convened an emergency session of the National Assembly on Monday “to take immediate actions with respect to the necessary humanitarian aid.”

The move came amid a crippling power outage that has paralyzed much of the country and put at risk patients in need of hospital care or dialysis since it began on Thursday.

Hospitals with generators were using them for emergency care. Concerns were growing that already limited food supplies were beginning to spoil.

“We must attend to this catastrophe immediately. We cannot turn away from it,” said Guaidó, who has been recognized as acting president by more than 50 countries.

President Nicolas Maduro has so far rejected international aid, using his security forces to repel an opposition bid last month to bring in aid through neighboring Colombia and Brazil.

Maduro has claimed that the power outage at the country’s Guri hydroelectric complex, the source of 80 per cent of the country’s power, was caused by a cyberattack. — AFP ■

The new Boeing 737 MAX: two crashes in six months

PARIS (France) — The 737 MAX, a new plane from US aircraft manufacturer Boeing, faces fresh scrutiny of its safety record after being involved in two crashes in six months.

The single-aisle airliner, which undertook its first commercial flight in May 2017, came under the spotlight in October last year in the wake of a fatal accident in Indonesia.

This photo taken on 10 October, 2018 shows a Lion Air Boeing 737-800 aircraft at the Mutiara Sis Al Jufri airport in Palu. An Indonesian Lion Air passenger plane went missing on 29 October, 2018 shortly after taking off from the capital Jakarta, an aviation authority official said, adding that a search and rescue operation is under way. PHOTO: AFP

Lion Air Flight 610 vanished from radar shortly after taking off from Jakarta on 29 October, crashing into waters off the north coast of Java Island and killing all 189 people onboard.

About 30 relatives of the crash victims have since filed lawsuits in the United States against Boeing, alleging that faults with the new airliner, including with its anti-stalling system, led to the deaths. Questions were raised by experts and a pilots’ union in the US about whether pilots had been properly trained and whether Boeing had fully shared data about changes made to the on-board control systems.

Boeing responded by saying that the 737 MAX was “as safe as any airplane that has ever flown the skies.”

There is no indication that a technical problem was to blame for the crash of the Boeing 737-

800 MAX operated by Ethiopian Airlines on Sunday which crashed minutes after taking off from Addis Ababa bound for Nairobi.

An investigation by aviation experts and analysis of the black-box flight recorders is expected to shed light on the causes of the crash.

Boeing is struggling to keep up with demand for the new aircraft, which offers far better fuel efficiency than earlier versions of the 737, the world’s top-selling airliner. Around 350 planes have been delivered to customers, with another 5,011 orders taken by Boeing, according to figures at the end of January.

Component suppliers and particularly the manufacturer of its engines — CFM, a joint venture between US-based General Electric and France’s Safran — have struggled to keep up with demand. — AFP ■

Malaysia court frees woman in North Korea murder case

SHAH ALAM (Malaysia) — An Indonesian woman accused of assassinating the North Korean leader's half-brother was freed on Monday after Malaysian prosecutors dropped a murder charge against her, in a shock decision a year and a half after she went on trial.

Siti Aisyah smiled as she was ushered through a pack of journalists and into a car outside the court, where she had been on trial alongside a Vietnamese woman for the murder of Kim Jong Nam at Kuala Lumpur airport in February 2017.

"I feel happy. I did not know this will happen. I did not expect it," said the 27-year-old, who was wearing a red headscarf.

It was a surprise move as the Shah Alam High Court, outside Kuala Lumpur, had been due only to hear Vietnamese accused Doan Thi Huong testify on Monday.

Huong's lawyer said she was "traumatised" that only Aisyah had been released, and the court agreed to adjourn the Vietnamese suspect's testimony to allow her legal team to apply for her murder charge to be dropped.

The women had always denied murder, saying they were tricked by North Korean spies into carrying out the Cold War-style hit using VX nerve agent and believed it was a prank for a reality TV show.

Their lawyers presented them as scapegoats, saying that authorities were unable to catch the real killers. Four North Koreans — formally accused of the murder alongside the women — fled Malaysia shortly after the Indonesian national Siti Aisyah (C) is escorted while leaving the Shah Alam High Court, outside Kuala Lumpur on 11 March, 2019 after her trial for her alleged role in the assassination of Kim Jong Nam, the half-brother of North Korean leader Kim Jong Un. assassination. The trial, which began in October 2017, had been due to resume on Monday with the defence stage of proceedings after a break of several months.

But at the start of the hearing, prosecutor Muhammad Iskandar Ahmad requested that the murder charge against Aisyah be withdrawn and that she be given a discharge, without providing a reason.

The judge agreed to the request for a discharge not amounting to an acquittal, and ordered Aisyah's immediate release. This means Aisyah has not been formally cleared of the charge and could in theory be arrested on suspicion of Kim's murder again.

Aisyah's lawyer Gooi Soon Seng said he was grateful for the decision: "We still truly believe that she is merely a scapegoat and she's innocent".

Huong 'traumatised'

But speaking to reporters through an interpreter in court, Huong said she felt "terrible" about her own position.

"I do not know what will happen to me now. I am innocent — please pray for me," she said. Huong's lawyer, Hisyam Teh Pok Teik, added that she was "traumatised by what happened in court".

In the northern Vietnamese province of Nam Dinh, her father

Doan Van Thanh expressed shock his daughter was still behind bars and called for her release.

"Why did they release the Indonesian girl without releasing my daughter?" he told AFP.

It was not immediately clear why Aisyah was released and not Huong, but Indonesia often makes concerted diplomatic efforts to get its citizens on death row overseas released.

"There has been a long process to free her... since she was detained," Indonesian foreign ministry spokesman Arrmanatha Nasir told reporters in Jakarta.

Indonesian ambassador to Malaysia Rusdi Kirana told reporters outside court he was pleased about the release of Aisyah, who was taken to the Indonesian embassy in Kuala Lumpur, and that she would be flown home as soon as possible.

Prosecutors had presented their case in the first stage of the trial. Witnesses described how the victim — the estranged half-brother of Kim Jong Un and once seen as heir apparent to the North Korean leadership — died in agony shortly after being attacked.

CCTV footage seen in court during the trial showed the suspects rushing to separate bathrooms in the airport after the murder, before leaving in taxis, and prosecutors likened it to something out of a James Bond movie. But their lawyers argued the four North Koreans were the masterminds, and provided the women with poison on the day of the murder before fleeing.

In August, a judge ruled there was sufficient evidence the suspects had engaged in a "well-planned conspiracy" with the North Koreans to murder Kim, and ordered that the trial continue to the defence stage.

South Korea has accused the North of ordering the hit, which Pyongyang denies.

Malaysia had been one of the nuclear-armed North's few allies but the assassination badly damaged ties, and led to the countries expelling each other's ambassadors. A murder conviction carries a mandatory penalty of death in Malaysia. The government has vowed to abolish capital punishment for all crimes, although parliament still needs to vote on changing the law.—AFP ■

Thai junta-aligned party reaches out in opposition heartland

NAKHON RATCHASIMA (Thailand) — Hundreds shouted and waved flags emblazoned with the face of Thailand's junta chief at a Sunday election rally held in territory with strong ties to the powerful opposition Shinawatra clan.

The army-aligned Phalang Pracharat party — which will push for General Prayut Chan-O-Cha to return as a civilian premier after the 24 March poll — campaigned across the northeastern "Isan" region this weekend in a bid to win over voters with deep antipathy to the military. In Nakhon Ratchasima, party secretary-general Sonthirat Sonjirawong said a vote for Prayut would help end Thailand's decade-long political gridlock.

"Today, the Korat people will have to decide if you want to see General Prayut Chan-O-Cha keep the country in peace and move it forward," he yelled at the crowd, using a local nickname for the city. Hundreds of supporters chanted "Uncle Tu!" — a nickname for Prayut, who was born in the province — and were eager to hug and take selfies with their local candidates. But thousands of plastic chairs stood empty and the crowd dispersed quickly after the leaders left the stage.

With the second largest number of constituencies after Bangkok, Korat holds the key to victory "so we have to win here", said party spokesman Kobsak Pootrakool. Aiding in the contest are a number of politicians poached from Pheu Thai, Thailand's most popular party, which swept most of Isan in the previous polls. "It will help very much... You have to have the person who knows the locals," Kobsak told AFP.—AFP ■

China's parliament takes up new foreign investment law

BELJING (China) — China's rubber-stamp parliament took up on Friday a draft foreign investment law that could help smooth out trade talks with the US as the world's top two economies angle towards a deal.

The legislation was presented at a session of the National People's Congress in Beijing and is expected to be approved on 15 March, the last day of the annual parliamentary meeting.

The bill will ban the illegal transfer of technology and "illegal government interference" in foreign businesses, a key point in Washington's contention that Beijing steals American technology.

The law aims to assuage concerns about China's business environment for foreign firms, but earlier versions of the draft drew criticism from some business groups.

The law "clearly stipulates that the state protects the intellectual property rights of foreign investors and foreign-invested enterprises and bars the use of administrative means to force technology transfer," said Ning Jizhe, vice chairman of China's state planner, the National Development and Reform Commission.—AFP ■

40,000 join first national climate march in Amsterdam

AMSTERDAM (Netherlands) — Tens of thousands of people marched through the heavy rain in Amsterdam on Sunday, calling on the Dutch government to act to counter the effects of climate change.

The organizers, including Greenpeace and a number of Dutch groups, said around 40,000 turned out for the demonstration, the first of its kind in the Netherlands.

“The high turnout is the proof that people now want a decisive policy on climate from the government,” they said in a statement. The Netherlands is particularly vulnerable to the consequences of climate change, as part of the country lies below sea level and some of its land has been reclaimed from the sea. “We are under sea level, so we really need to do something about it,” said one demonstrator, Esther Leverstein, a 21-year-old climate studies student at Amsterdam University.

“We’re great with water (management) but we need to step up our game.” Gert van Rees, a 72-year-old pensioner, said she was concerned for future generations.

“We have seven grand-children and sometimes we are really worried. So that’s why we are here, it really should change.”

In February, around 15,000 school students skipped school to march for action on climate change, following the example of their fellow students across the border in Belgium.

A second youth march for the climate is scheduled for Thursday in Amsterdam.—AFP ■

Japanese city works on farming of sea urchins by cabbage waste

AOMORI (Japan) — A northeastern Japanese city has been working on a project to farm sea urchins, an expensive delicacy in the country and elsewhere, by waste cabbages in lieu of wild ones during the winter season.

The project by the city of Mutsu in Aomori Prefecture is aimed at securing a new source of income for local fishery operators when they do not catch wild sea urchins, which grow by eating seaweed and come into season between April and July.

Natural sea urchins do not grow well in winter as there is not much fresh seaweed. A fishery cooperative in the city’s Ohata area, participating in the project, has refrained from picking them up during the season. “We want to create a new business model that can give hope for fishery operators,” said Mutsu Mayor Soichiro Miyashita of the experiment using leaf vegetables disposed of by supermarkets.

Their challenge started after officials heard about the idea of cultivating sea urchins with cabbages when they visited the Kanagawa Prefecture Fisheries Technology Centre in Miura, south of Tokyo, last June. The edible interior “lobe” of the sea urchin, a small creature with a round prickly shell, is among the most popular items for sushi. After carrying out the experiment between September and December, the city and the fishery cooperative learned that sea urchins raised by the vegetables were almost equivalent of those in high season and tasted good.—Kyodo News ■

Australia blames firms for slow response to Solomons oil spill

SYDNEY (Australia) — Australia expressed alarm on Friday at the slow response from firms linked to a grounded cargo ship that has for weeks been leaking oil into a World Heritage-listed coral atoll in the Solomon Islands.

MV Solomon Trader ran aground during high winds on 5 February while loading bauxite at remote Rennell Island.

More than a month later, the 225-metre (740-foot) ship is still stuck on the reef and has leaked more than 70 tonnes of heavy fuel oil into the sea, with another 600 tonnes still on the stricken vessel.

“We needed much speedier action in response to what is potentially a very significant natural disaster,” Australia’s minister for international development and the Pacific, Anne Ruston, told AFP on Friday.

“We would have liked to have seen that the operator and their necessary insurers were a little bit quicker to respond to what was happening, instead of leaving it up to Australia and the Solomon Islands to respond.”

The ship’s insurer, Korean Protection and Indemnity Club (KP&I), issued an apology late Wednesday on behalf of itself and the vessel’s Hong Kong-based owner, King Trader Ltd.

Addressing delays in responding to the disaster, KP&I said a tug initially tried to manoeuvre the ship off the reef but poor weather intervened and pushed it further onshore.

Rennell Island is the largest raised coral atoll in the world and includes a UNESCO World Heritage site which extends kilometres out to sea.

The islanders rely on waters in the ecologically delicate region for their livelihoods.

Experts and specialised equipment are now on site from as far afield as Australia, New Zealand, Vanuatu, the United States, Singapore and Europe.

They are cleaning up the shore and removing the remaining oil from the ship, while divers were to inspect the hull and seal any leaks. The Australian government has sent salvage experts to assist the response and vowed to help the Solomons make sure those responsible for the spill are held to account.—AFP ■

'Captain Marvel' soars to rarefied heights in N American opening

LOS ANGELES (United States) — "Captain Marvel," the first Marvel Studios/Disney superhero film with a female lead, has soared to rare heights in North American theaters, with whopping weekend ticket sales of $153 million, industry watcher Exhibitor Relations reported.

Added to the $302 million taken in internationally, the film's estimated total of $455 million for the three-day weekend would give it the sixth highest global debut ever, according to Variety, and the best domestic start for a superhero film since Disney and Marvel's "Black Panther" opened last year with $202 million.

The film stars Brie Larson, winner of a 2016 Best Actress Oscar for "Room," as Carol Danvers, a former fighter pilot who gains superhuman powers in a fluke accident and finds herself in the middle of a galactic conflict. Also starring are Samuel L. Jackson, Ben Mendelsohn, Djimon Hounsou, Annette Bening and Jude Law. The film, which opened on International Women's Day, was co-directed by Anna Boden and Ryan Fleck.

Trailing light-years behind in second place, at $14.7 million, was Universal's "How to Train Your Dragon: The Hidden World," which had topped the North American box office for two straight weekends. The final installment in the "Dragon" trilogy, voiced by Jay Baruchel, America Ferrera, Cate Blanchett and F Murray Abraham, tells the story of young Hiccup and his dragon Toothless on their quest to find a reputed dragon utopia. In third, down one spot, was Lionsgate's "A Madea Family Funeral" from actor/director Tyler Perry.

The latest comic chapter about the irreverent but caring elderly title character (played by Perry) earned $12.1 million. Fourth spot went to Warner Bros.' "The Lego Movie 2: The Second Part," at $3.8 million. Chris Pratt, Elizabeth Banks and Will Arnett voice the animated toys in a story of love and apocalypse in a plastic universe. And in fifth was Fox's "Alita: Battle Angel" at $3.2 million. The sci-fi fantasy stars Rosa Salazar as a nearly human cyborg who has lost her memory.

Rounding out the weekend's top 10 were:

- "Green Book" ($2.5 million)
- "Isn't It Romantic" ($2.4 million)
- "Fighting With My Family" ($2.2 million)
- "Greta" ($2.2 million)
- "Apollo 11" ($1.3 million)

Japanese woman confirmed as world's oldest person aged 116

TOKYO (Japan) — A 116-year-old Japanese woman who still enjoys studying math and playing board games has been recognised as the world's oldest person, the Guinness World Records said on Saturday.

Kane Tanaka was born on 2 January 1903, the year when the Wright brothers launched humanity's first powered flight, according to Guinness.

Tanaka's recognition was celebrated at the nursing home where she lives in western Japan's Fukuoka by city mayor Soichiro Takashima and other well-wishers. Asked what moment she was the most happy in life, she replied: "Now."

She married Hideo Tanaka

in 1922, giving birth to four children and adopting a fifth.

Kane normally wakes each morning at 6 am and passes the afternoons by studying mathematics and practicing calligraphy.

"One of Kane's favourite pastimes is a game of Othello and she's become an expert at the classic board game, often beating rest-home staff," Guinness said.

Japan has one of the world's highest life expectancies and has been home to several people recognised as among the oldest humans to have ever lived.

They include Jiroemon Kimura, the longest-living man on record, who died soon after his 116th birthday in June 2013.

Slovakia's ice church draws visitors closer to heavens

HREBIENOK (Slovakia) — A young nun breathes deeply as she peers up at a statue of an angel bathed in softly coloured light streaming through a church, and as she exhales, you can see her breath.

Instead of wood or bricks and mortar, this chilly house of worship perched among the snowy peaks of Slovakia's High Tatra Mountains has been built from massive crystal-clear blocks of ice. At 1,285 metres (4,200 feet) above sea level, the ice replica of Saint Peter's Basilica in Rome is higher than any of Slovakia's 4,158 churches, more than half of them Roman Catholic.

Although it has not been consecrated, another visitor, Zlatica Janakova from southern Slovakia, says it feels like a real church.

"It's so good for your soul; it provides you with tranquillity," she whispers.

"All of nature is inside and around this temple," she adds, gazing at the surrounding alpine vistas. Englishman Martin, who declined to give his surname, describes it as a "beautiful, religious place, so peaceful and calm".

Since 2013, ice sculptors have flocked to the Slovak Tatra mountain hamlet of Hrebienok every winter to build a Tatra Ice Temple, or scaled-down replica of a famous church using only crystal-clear ice blocks.

This year, it's an 11-metre (36-foot) tall version of the 16th-century Vatican basilica, complete with the imposing two half-circle wings of Bernini's colonnade.

A quarter of a million tourists last year took the short funicular ride up the mountain to see the ice replica of Barcelona's soaring and intricate Sagrada Familia.

Ice almighty

A team of 16 sculptors from Slovakia, the Czech Republic, Poland, Wales and the United States worked 12 hours a day for a month to create this year's ice temple. On Sundays, the venue vibrates with the sounds of sacred music concerts.

"I'm glad to see people crossing themselves and praying inside," says Slovak chief sculptor Adam Bakos.

The interior boasts sculptures modelled on the works of Italian masters side-by-side with those of chamois, marmots and other wildlife native to the High Tatras. "I gave them a free hand with the decoration, so each artist added their signature style to the sculptures," Bakos said.

Slovak-Greek artist Achilleas Sdoukos designed and produced stained-glass decorations incorporated into the temple's icy walls. The building material, namely 1,880 ice blocks weighing a total of 225 tonnes, was imported from neighbouring Poland.

"We tried different suppliers, from the Netherlands, England, Norway and Hungary, but Polish ice seemed to have the highest quality, it really looks like glass if kept cold enough," says Rastislav Kromka, technical director of the Tatra Ice Temple.

Challenging

With an unusually warm winter threatening to melt details on their sculpture, Bakos and his team covered it with a geodesic dome, measuring 25 metres in diameter.

They also installed refrigeration units to ensure a bone-chilling minus 10 degrees Celsius (14 degrees Fahrenheit) to keep the ice solid. "Cold wind was blowing in our faces from the AC (air conditioning) all day long.

"It was like a chopper ride in January. "Once we were done, I didn't even want to open the freezer at home anymore," he jokes. More than 15 carpenters helped sculptors with the demanding task of stacking the ice blocks, each weighing 125 kilograms (275 pounds). —AFP ■

Things to be expected of aerospace by 2050: study

AUSTIN (United States) — Flying air taxi, drone delivery, supersonic business travel between continents, and an emerging market for space-based research and manufacturing — these are among the innovations in the vision of scientists and experts in the aerospace industry by 2050.

The new developments were highlighted in What's Next for Aerospace and Defence: A Vision for 2050, a study conducted by the Aerospace Industries Association (AIA) in partnership with McKinsey & Company and released at the on-going South by Southwest (SXSW) Conference and Festivals, a platform that gathers innovators and entrepreneurs from across the globe to breed and fund new ideas.

Built on interviews with over 70 industry leaders, Vision 2050 finds that the aerospace and defence industry will continue to be the driving force behind the way the world moves, connects, explores and inspires, and the innovations in aerospace sector will shape the world over the next thirty years.

These experts see a world shaped by the ease and convenience of urban air mobility and widely available autonomous drone delivery, the speed of supersonic air travel, and the promise of emerging markets for resource extraction and manufacturing in space — all underpinned by artificial intelligence and more rigorous, self-evolving, and proactive cyber security defenses, according to the study.

Realizing these interrelated and mutually reinforcing technological innovations will require stakeholders across government and industry to begin investing today in the new capabilities and partnerships needed to build this bright future, the report of the study said.

“For over 100 years, the aerospace and defense (A&D) industry has moved, connected, secured, explored, and inspired the world.

From the first time humans took flight to our journey to the Moon and beyond, the industry's innovations and achievements have shaped modern life,” said Eric Fanning, president and CEO of AIA.

“As new technologies emerge and evolve, A&D is poised to become even more essential to our daily lives,” he said. He said that it is impossible to perfectly predict how technologies and their uses will develop over 30 years, but these experts have painted a remarkable picture of the potential uses of these technologies; the scientific and technical advancements, regulations, and cultural factors that enable them; and the extent to which they are likely to be a part of everyday lives by 2050.

Alzheimer's treatment holds promise for Primary Progressive Aphasia patients: study

CHICAGO — Researchers at Northwestern Medicine have discovered that an existing therapy frequently used to treat Alzheimer's disease might work on patients with Primary Progressive Aphasia (PPA), a type of dementia that destroys language and currently has no treatment.

To conduct the study, the researchers used brains of individuals who suffered from PPA and had the pathological diagnosis of Alzheimer pathology in the brain postmortem. Their brains were compared to those of cognitively normal individuals.

Chemical brain scans called positron emission tomography (PET) can determine if there is Alzheimer's Disease pathology in someone's brain while they are alive. This makes it possible to see if someone has the type of PPA associated with Alzheimer's disease or not, said the study by Northwestern Medicine, an integrated healthcare system that brings together physicians and researchers from award-winning facilities in the Chicago area.

The study found for the first time that individuals with PPA undergo the same loss of cholinergic neurons and axons in the forebrain as individuals with Alzheimer's. Therefore, they might also benefit from Alzheimer's treatment, according to a news release posted on the website of Northwestern University on Wednesday.

Currently, Alzheimer's patients are treated with a class of drugs called cholinesterase inhibitors, which lessen Alzheimer's symptoms by preventing the breakdown of acetylcholine, a chemical messenger that contributes to learning and memory.

“The findings provide the basic scientific foundation to spur a clinical trial to test the treatment on patients with PPA,” said senior author Changiz Geula, a professor of cell and molecular biology at Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine.

The study was published Wednesday online by Neurology, the medical journal of the American Academy of Neurology.—Xinhua ■

GDFI France, Mandalay Yoma Energy join hands to promote Myanmar minigrids projects

GDF International SAS (GDFI), a member of the ENGIE Group, will be partnering and investing in Myanmar with Mandalay Yoma Energy to enable faster development of energy access projects in the country.

The contract signing ceremony between Sol Partners, the Singapore-based holding company of Mandalay Yoma Energy, and GDFI was held in Naypyidaw and was attended by high-level representatives from

as well as national media.

By combining ENGIE's global expertise and Mandalay Yoma Energy's local experience, the partners intend to promote access to clean and reliable energy, supporting Myanmar Government in reaching its goal of universal access to electricity in the country. The partners will implement solar mini-grids across villages in 2019 to 2020, leading to electrification of thousands of rural households. The development of projects will be under the DRD minigrid program that is aligned with the National Electrification Plan 2030 supported by the World Bank.—GNLM

First ever images of black holes to come out soon: scientists

AUSTIN (United States) — After years of global efforts, the first ever images of our own Galaxy's central black hole are expected to come out within this year, according to scientists working in the project. “We're very optimistic that it will succeed. We've done almost everything,” Sheperd Doleman, project director and senior astronomer at Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics, told Xinhua at a conference session of the on-going 10-day South by Southwest (SXSW) Conference and Festivals, a platform that gathers innovators and entrepreneurs from across the globe to breed and fund new ideas.

Doleman said that the remaining work is testing and double checking what have been obtained, after that the images will be finalized and officially announced sometime in 2019.

According to four scientists, involved in the project along with about 200 scientists globally, who delivered speeches at the conference session, the expected images are products of the Event Horizon Telescope (EHT), which is a global effort to construct an Earth-sized virtual telescope array, able to actually “photograph” nearby supermassive black holes. It had its first full run in April 2017, collected data of black holes with eight telescopes around the globe, including one in the South Pole.

“We've a goal of seeing something that struggles with all of its might to be unseen, and we're pushing the technology as far as we can go,” said Doleman. Sera Markoff, professor of theoretical astrophysics and astroparticle physics at the University of Amsterdam, said that the EHT images will be the first real bird's eye view which helps understand how the black hole can profoundly impact the largest structures in the universe.—Xinhua ■

Arsenal inflict first domestic defeat on Solskjaer to surge into top four

LONDON (United Kingdom) — Arsenal inflicted Ole Gunnar Solskjaer's first domestic defeat as Manchester United caretaker manager to leapfrog their opponents into the Premier League's top four with a vital 2-0 victory at the Emirates on Sunday.

Granit Xhaka's early strike and Pierre Emmerik-Aubameyang's penalty 21 minutes from time moved the Gunners into fourth, two points above United in fifth.

Unai Emery's men also close to within just a point of third-placed Tottenham and now hold the upper hand in the race for Champions League qualification.

Arsenal do not face any of the top six in their remaining eight league games, whilst United host title-chasing Manchester

City and Chelsea in the coming weeks on top of their Champions League and FA Cup commitments.

European trips to France for both sides in midweek produced vastly contrasting results as United shocked free-spending Paris Saint-Germain 3-1 to progress to the quarter-finals of the Champions League.

The Gunners on the other hand went down 3-1 to Rennes to give themselves a mountain to climb in Thursday's second leg to reach the last eight of the Europa League.

Emery made five changes from that side and was rewarded with a fast start that could have been rewarded inside two minutes had Alexandre Lacazette connected with Sead Kolasinac's wicked cross.

However, Arsenal were nearly hit with a sucker punch when with United's first attack, Romelu Lukaku turned Luke Shaw's cross onto the crossbar for the first of a series of wasted chances for the Belgian striker.

David de Gea made 14 saves as the Red Devils won 3-1 at the Emirates last season in one of the Spaniard's best ever United performances.

But for once De Gea was found wanting for the opening goal as he failed to read the swerve on Xhaka's long-range strike.

United seemed to feel the after-effects of their heroics in Paris early on, but soon clicked into gear to look more like the side that had suffered just one defeat in Solskjaer's first 17 games in charge.—AFP ■

INDIAN WELLS (United States) — World number two Rafael Nadal steamed into the third round of the ATP Indian Wells Masters on Sunday with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over American Jared Donaldson.

The 17-time Grand Slam champion, who owns three Indian Wells titles, needed just 72 minutes to get past world number 192 Donaldson, who returned to the tour in February after six months sidelined by a knee injury.

Klopp defiant after Liverpool battle back to beat Burnley

LIVERPOOL (United Kingdom) — Jurgen Klopp warned title rivals Manchester City that Liverpool will not give up their title bid quietly after a 4-2 victory over Burnley cut Pep Guardiola's lead at the top of the Premier League to a single point.

Liverpool responded impressively to City's win against Watford on Saturday, rallying strongly after falling behind to a controversial opening goal from Burnley, with two goals each from Roberto Firmino and Sadio Mane.

And the German manager, whose side visit Bayern Munich in their Champions League last-16 second leg tie on Wednesday, insisted that the performance demonstrated his team's ability to handle the pressure.

"The message from today is that nobody gets rid of us," said Klopp. "We had the perfect mixture of fighting the opponent and playing football."

"All we have to do is make sure that we stay in this really interesting competition on top of the table. We have no problem with confidence, we're in a good moment."

The victory was also a triumph for Adam Lallana, the England midfielder whose inclusion in the starting line-up was not universally popular among Liverpool supporters but who turned in a man-of-the-match display.

Lallana changed the momentum of the game just before the half-hour, charging down a poor clearance from Phil Bardley and seeing Mohamed Salah tackled by Charlie Taylor before the ball broke kindly to Mane, who curled in from 15 yards.

"It is not only Adam but it was clear, if he can play like he trained, then he will help us a lot and that is exactly how it happened," said Klopp.

"He is always good on the ball but he is an aggressive boy. The counter press is a game-changer. It didn't look really promising until he jumped in so well done, really pleased for him."

It was a strong response from Liverpool after they fell behind against Sean Dyche's struggling team in the sixth minute.

Defender Joel Matip needlessly conceded a corner which Ashley Westwood curled directly into the Liverpool goal with keeper Alisson Becker protesting furiously that he had been impeded, earning a booking for sprinting 40 yards to remonstrate with referee Andre Marriner.

"The early goal we conceded, usually it would have been disallowed, if the ref had a view," said Klopp. "I saw the first minute it is a foul, you cannot treat the goalie like this. The good thing is it is early, we had time to turn it around."

This was a real test of Liverpool's mental fortitude after a run that had seen them draw five of their previous seven games in the league and Champions League but a test they passed impressively.

They trailed for just 13 minutes, equalising with a flowing move started when Salah and Georginio Wijnaldum exchanged passes, the former crossed and, after Tom Heaton and James Tarkowski missed the ball, Firmino was able to tap into an open net. After taking a 2-1 lead into the interval, courtesy of Mane's goal, Liverpool effectively killed off the game midway through the second half.—AFP ■
